

Westcave Preserve has over 170 different avian species, including the endangered Golden-cheeked Warbler.

Westcave supports a large variety of migratory and resident bird species. This is due, in part to the diversity of habitats found at Westcave, including a Live Oak – Ashe Juniper savanna and a riparian woodland in the canyon.

Westcave is within the central migratory flyway, one of four main migration routes birds follow during migration. Migration Flyways are often areas that provide adequate food, water, and shelter for birds. The endangered Golden-cheeked Warblers (here between March and June) are among the spring migrants.
