HEALTH HIGHLIGHTS

August is . . . National Immunization Awareness Month

Over the years, vaccines have prevented countless cases of diseases and saved millions of lives. Vaccines are important to helping people stay healthy, and protected from serious and sometimes deadly diseases. Staying up to date on recommended immunizations can help keep you healthy in response to emergencies, including disease outbreaks and natural disasters

Vaccines help protect you from getting sick or severely ill. People need different vaccinations depending on their age, location, lifestyle, travel schedule, health condition, or previous vaccinations.

Vaccines like those for the flu and COVID-19 are especially important if you're frequently in shared spaces with high touch surfaces that can make illnesses easy to spread. Everyone needs immunizations to help them prevent getting, and spreading serious diseases to their loved ones or others in their community.

- Everyone 6 months and older needs the seasonal flu (influenza) vaccine every year. The flu vaccine is especially important for people with chronic health conditions, pregnant women, and older adults.
- CDC recommends COVID-19 primary series vaccines for everyone ages 6 months and older, and COVID-19 boosters for everyone ages 5 years and older, if eligible.

Immunizations are not just for children, some childhood vaccines can wear off over time. Adults may also be at risk for vaccine preventable disease due to age, job, lifestyle, travel, or health conditions.

It's important that everyone stay up to date on their immunizations so that they are protected when disaster strikes. What classifies as being up to date? When you have received all doses in the primary series of a vaccine and all boosters recommended for you. Staying up to date can help keep you, your loved ones, and your community safe.
