

Healthnetwork Pulse

Dear Healthnetwork Friends,

Well, this spring was a LONG time in coming. I hope that you are enjoying the change seasons in good health and good spirits!

I also hope that you can take a few minutes to check out our latest magazine.

You won't want to miss the interview with Dr. Sandip Mukherjee and Dr. Jamie Gerber from Yale Medicine, one of our valued healthcare partners. These men are at the top of their field, known worldwide—and yet they are endearingly humble. I enjoyed speaking with them, and I know you'll enjoy the interview.

Speaking of doctors doing interesting things...

I recently had the pleasure of meeting with Lee W. Jones from Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, another of our esteemed healthcare partners. He told me about his research in exercise oncology as we walked through Central Park, and I was blown away. Can exercise help a person recover faster and more completely after cancer? His research says yes. Can exercise during chemotherapy help a person handle the treatment better and recover faster? Again, his research indicates yes. Lee even believes in some cases, exercise can help prevent cancer. You can read more about his work here.

Quick poll:

Would you be interested in a webinar with Lee W. Jones to learn more about the emerging science of exercise oncology? If so, just reply to this email with a quick “yes” and I'll know what you're referring to.

Thank you for your ongoing support and enthusiasm for our mission of making medicine better for all. You are deeply appreciated by all of us here at Healthnetwork Foundation.
