Summer Playtime!

Wahoo!! Summer time is here and the kids are out of school meaning plenty of fun water time, vacation time, and time for Amanda and I to go to Denver for the International New Age Trade Show (INATS). We will be restocking textiles, all the fun metaphysical items and tools, plus adding brand new products that are being introduced at INATS. We will also be gathering names of presenters for future events in our Community Event Center such as book authors, tarot card designers and new activities producers. Be sure to follow us on social media and visit NTRocks.com for notices of new arrivals and special events.

Summer time also means our Summer Solstice Clearance Sale. This is the time when we clean house so we put out flats of crystals, fossils and miscellaneous items marked down from 30% - 75%. For those of you who experienced our Solstice Sale last year, you'll remember the boxes of treasures with colored dots for $1.00 - $3.00 - $5.00 - $10.00.....even some opportunities to "make an offer." We look forward to all of our crystals making their way into a good new home.

With the kids out of school, remember Nature's Treasures is a perfect place to spend an afternoon helping them to learn about the natural sciences in a hands-on environment. E-mail our geology specialist, Michael, and schedule a time for a special one-on-one guided tour for a group of friends or plan a special birthday party. Just because children are not in school doesn't mean they can't continue to learn in a fun, creative and visual way that they will remember for years. Learning how to hunt fossils and minerals around town can be a fun family event for the weekend that helps everyone reconnect with Mother Nature, and we all know how important that is for our total well-being.

We are still looking for someone who loves to be around rocks and who can lift up to 50 lbs. on a regular basis. This could be a great summer job to earn some extra cash or a filler job for someone who has other responsibilities, but can spare a few days. If you know someone let them know to contact us for further details.

Hope to see y'all at our clearance sale and remember to take and post pictures of your spectacular buys.

May Blessings
Karen Richards

NATURE'S TREASURES IN THE COMMUNITY

Nature's Treasures welcomed the Boys and Girls Club of Thurmond Heights on 05/24 for an educational, guided tour with a focus on the minerals and gems from the popular cartoon, Steven Universe

On 05/26, our geology specialist visited the Blubonnet School in Cedar Park to teach preschoolers about rock textures, colors, shapes and even density! This was a 'Thank You' note from Ms. Jackie's class!

Alexandrite

Alexandrite is a stone of prosperity and longevity. It balances mind and emotion, pacifying the soul to promote spiritual growth. Alexandrite, a rare gem variety of Chrysoberyl, was originally discovered in 1834 in emerald mines of the Ural Mountains of Russia. In the daylight it is of bluish-green or even emerald-green color, and in the artificial light it may be red, crimson, purple-red and violet-red. It is has been referred to as "emerald by day and ruby by night." Originally the dense-green stone was mistaken for an emerald; however it was harder than an emerald, and in the candle light it lighted up with a blood-red fire.

Alexandrite was named for the future Russian Czar Alexander II. Since red and green are national Russian colors, Alexandrite acquired wide popularity in Russia and was generally considered as a stone of good fortune. Its popularity led to this precious gem being mined out with some lesser quality specimens later being discovered in Brazil.

The Treasure Tome: A Trove of Knowledge

Encoding Enchodus

By Diane Parma

Enchodus, also known as the Sabre-Toothed Herring, can be identified by its 4 distinct fangs that look like a saber-toothed tiger's. In fact, the Enchodus is completely unrelated to the herring fish and is actually more closely related to salmon.

http://www.fossilworld.com/FW/F_Enchodus_Tooth.html

As Enchodus grows, new fangs form out of the skull. This can be seen by looking at the scars on the palatine or dentary bones that form the equivalent of jaws in fish. Teeth that form on the lower jaw called mandibular while those forming on the upper jaw are known as maxillary teeth.

Maxillary tooth

Enchodus is a type of Osteichthyes, a group of fish known more commonly as "bony fish." Bony fish have gill covers to breath and a bladder they can also see in color. Enchodus also belong to the class of fish known as Actinopterygii or ray-finned fish. This class of fish is characterized by webbed skin held by together by spines. There are a many species of Enchodus. Enchodus Gladiolus sp. specifically has a notably large pectoral fin that may have been used in much the same way as modern day "flying fish." The largest species, Enchodus Petrosus sp., had a body length of almost 5 feet with fangs measuring 2.4 inches. Enchodus Parvus sp., the smallest species, had a body length of only a few inches.

Enchodus lived during the late Cretaceous to the Eocene (100 to 33 million years ago) even surviving a major extinction event at the Cretaceous-Paleogene boundary. In addition to living for a long time, Enchodus could be found worldwide much like modern ray-finned fish that can be found in Polar Regions, tropical climates, both fresh and salt water, and in shallow and deep waters. The fact that its closest living relative is so adept at surviving in a diverse range of environments is the same trait that probably contributed to Enchodus' survival for 10s of millions of years.

Based on its bone and tooth structures, Enchodus was likely a predator. Despite this fact Enchodus had a great many predators of its own as evidenced by itsbones being found in the rib cages of Mosasaurs, Plesiosaurs, sharks, and even sea birds.
