Happy Valentine's Day!

Greetings from Tucson, Arizona!

Yes, we're at the Tucson International Gem, Fossil & Mineral Show buying our new inventory for 2019 and your goodies for our 13th Annual Tucson Trunk Sale on March 9-17. We still have another 3 weeks to shop but I'm so excited about a special buy I've already made. Warning - it's big, and you know how we like to do big at Nature's Treasures. Watch our social media posts for more detailed pictures, but right now I can tell you it's all about Amethyst and you are not going to believe the special pricing for this lot of beauties. There are so many pieces we are going to have a special tent set up in the back to house this specially priced lot of amazing pieces.

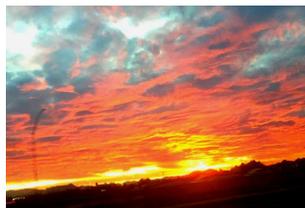

February always brings to mind thoughts of Valentines, love and hearts, so I thought I'd share a picture of the largest heart shaped amethyst geode I've ever seen. It weights several tons and was a sight to behold.

I hope everyone took the time to review last year's list of achievements and is looking forward to new adventures this year. We can't grow without change and change usually comes with adventures, so hold on tight, keep smiling and breathing, and everything will turn out just fine.

I would like to share one more picture with you of the sun setting in Tucson this evening. Enjoy - I did!

Blessings

10 Fun Facts About Amethyst

1. Amethyst is the birthstone for the month of February, and the official gem for Wednesday, Jupiter and those born under the sign of Pisces.
2. Amethyst is the official gemstone of the province of Ontario.
3. Amethyst has been used to symbolize deep love, happiness, humility, sincerity and wealth.
4. Amethyst was once revered as the "Jewel of the Gods."
5. Amethyst rings are traditionally worn by Bishops; some believe that amethyst brings good luck to petitioners.
6. Farmers believed wearing amethyst would protect their crops from hailstones and locusts.
7. The Hebrew word for amethyst is "ahlamah," meaning "dream;" the stone was said to cause dreams and visions... and if you dream of amethyst, you will be free from harm.
8. Amethyst was the emblem for Matthew, one of the 12 Apostles.
9. Leonardo da Vinci believed amethyst had the power to control evil thoughts, to quicken intelligence, and to make men shrewd in business matters.
10. Prasiolite, a rare dark green variety of quartz, is sometimes (wrongly) called green amethyst.

Treasure Tome: A Trove of Knowledge

Ode to Geode!

By Michael J. Kallstrom, MS

*Oh Geode, so plain as to not inspire second thought,
Yet thou intrigue me still with curious wonder,
For wisdom you contain, not easily raught,
That judging without beauty within is blunder.*

Geodes epitomize the wisdom of not "judging a book by its cover" as they often times appear to be "just a rock" but contain within a beautiful world of crystals and minerals. Despite their less than plain exteriors, these rocks attract many different people for the wondrous treasures they hide within. Forming in both sedimentary and volcanic rocks all over the world, geodes have often been a mystery to the general public despite being widely known. How do such magical rocks form?

Well to understand the answer to that question, we must first understand what a geode is. A geode is a rock consisting of a cavity lined with crystals or mineraloid matter. The term geode describes a formation rather than a composition, so you can have geodes of all different shapes and mineral content. For example, amethyst "cathedrals" from Brazil are a specific variety of geode, while Texas has been known to produce ellipsoidal calcite and celestite geodes. Regardless of their origin, shape or what they contain, all geodes form from a similar (although still debated) process.

Geodes form, quite simply, by a void filling in with new material out of a fluid. The major difference between sedimentary and volcanic geodes occurs in the first step of this process...cavity formation. In sedimentary geodes, found mostly in limestones and dolostones, a preexisting nodule within the rock gets dissolved away by groundwater, resulting in a void. In the case of volcanogenic geodes, found mostly in deep tuff deposits and lava flows, the cavities form from relic volatile pockets or "bubbles" that became trapped in the volcanic rocks as they cooled quickly. In some cases lava flows, such as those found in Brazil, produce pillow basalts and lava tubes. The outer shell of these pillows and tubes insulate lava inside allowing the lava to continue to flow leaving behind empty spaces. In all of these instances hydrothermal groundwater flows through surrounding rocks and leaches out key elements necessary for mineral formation. In the case of sedimentary environments, the major element is calcium with varying amounts of strontium, manganese, carbon and sulfur. Volcanic rocks are generally more silica rich with trace amounts of iron and magnesium. When these highly reactive and chemical-rich fluids fill in the empty cavities and begin to cool slowly the elements bond together to form the magnificent gems that give geodes their allure. Each different fluid that passes through the void deposits a concentric layer of mineralization. In some cases the voids fill in completely with one material or in other cases contain a variety of minerals.

Moroccan Geodes $10/lb

Geodes appeal to a wide range of enthusiasts. In some cases the geodes completely fill in with beautiful bands of colorful chalcedony, a variety of cryptocrystalline quartz. This banded chalcedony material is known as agate and is highly sought after by collectors for the unique traits found at each locality throughout the world. Currently Nature's Treasures houses some of the only Island Agate and River Crossing Condor Agate available to the general public in North America. The metaphysical community values geodes for their ability to draw in negativity, contain it and ultimately transform it into positive energy. Some metaphysicians even use geodes as a healing tool to remove negative entities from people and places that remain trapped by the positive energy of the crystals. However, the largest contingency of geode lovers are by far pure-hearted children, and families they belong to. The sheer curiosity and wonderment of what an unbroken geode contains inside can draw out the child from within even the most stone-hearted adult.

The unknown world within each geode is much akin to the unknown of new beginnings. Often times we fear the unknown of what is coming and forget to celebrate the beauty of what could be. In order to remember the joy of the New Year, one Nature's Treasures family has established their own annual tradition. For the New Year the parents and children collectively choose an uncracked geode, take it home, and crack it open. To them this is a blessing on the year to come and reminds us to be excited about the treasures our futures hold rather than fear the unknown of it. With the Chinese New Year coming up on February 5th, this is a prime time to break in a new tradition (or geode) and reclaim the beauty within and the joy of each new day.

Notes on Agates:

Silica is the key component to agate formation since it belongs to the quartz family made up of SiO<sub>2</sub>. Because of their beauty and durability, agates have been used since the Neolithic as tools, jewelry, tableware and decor for thousands of years. Although agate has been used for ages, new world agates have only been mined recently and many varieties are mined out.
