◀ BOURBON ▶

ALL BOURBON IS WHISKEY. NOT ALL WHISKEY IS BOURBON

Declared "America's Native Spirit" by congress in 1964, bourbon is a type of whiskey containing a minimum of 51% corn in the grain mix and aged in new, charred oak. It must begin the barrel-aging at no more than 125 proof and be bottled between 80 and 160 proof. Despite popular perception, bourbon can be distilled anywhere in the United States, not just in Kentucky, although 95% of the world's bourbon is. In fact, there are more barrels of bourbon than there are people in Kentucky - or in New Zealand, for that matter.

◀ RYE ▶

A type of whiskey with at least 51% rye in the mash bill, aged in new charred oak barrels. Unlike bourbon, it can be made anywhere in the world and is often associated with Canadian whiskies. It has more fruit and spice characters and is typically considered 'drier' than bourbon.

◀ TENNESSE WHISKEY ▶

While technically bourbon, the folks in Tennessee like to distinguish themselves and, under law, to be labelled "Tennessee Whiskey" it must be charcoal-mellowed. One exception is the team at Prichard's who must have a great legal team, as they have been granted exemption from the bill.

◀ OTHER AMERICAN WHISKEYS ▶

Although bourbon gets the biggest share of the limelight, there are plenty of other interesting whiskeys being made in Kentucky and all around the US that don't fit the exact requirements for being labelled as bourbon - due to their mash bill.
