Male pattern hair loss is driven primarily by DHT — a potent androgen that miniaturizes hair follicles over time. Compounded topical therapy attacks it from multiple angles simultaneously: blocking DHT at the follicle, stimulating blood flow, and supporting follicle health directly at the scalp — without the systemic side effects that come with oral medications.

What's In It

Finasteride	Minoxidil	Caffeine	Ketoconazole
Blocks DHT conversion at the follicle. Topical delivery minimizes systemic exposure versus oral.	Widens blood vessels, increases follicle size, and extends the hair growth cycle.	Stimulates follicle cell metabolism and counteracts DHT-related growth suppression directly.	Antifungal with anti-androgenic properties — reduces scalp inflammation and DHT activity.

Why Topical?

Oral finasteride is effective but carries well-documented concerns about sexual side effects in some men. Topical delivery concentrates the medication where it's needed — at the scalp — with significantly lower systemic absorption. The result is targeted DHT blockade without the hormonal exposure that drives oral side effects. For many men, topical compounding is the smarter first choice.

What to Expect

- Daily Application
Applied once daily to affected scalp areas. Absorbs quickly — no residue.
- Results Take Time
Hair growth is a slow process. Most men notice improvement at 3–6 months with consistent use.
- Custom Formula
Your prescriber selects the combination and concentrations right for your pattern and severity.
